Graduate and student from foster care, Natalie Kyles, 2012, Michigan State University

Among the most common cited reasons for students from foster care dropping out of college is the inability to pay tuition and fees.

(Courtney et al. 2011)

A Step-By-Step Approach to Financial Aid in Higher Education

Most students from foster care use a number of different ways to pay for higher education. In the Midwest Study of the Adult Functioning of Former Foster Youth, researchers found that of the 56% of students enrolled in a 2-year program, 68% of this group are paying for school through scholarships or grants, 46% are paying through loans, and only 5% receive assistance from a parent, relative, or foster family. Use this guide to explore all the options and then make a choice for the best fit!

STEP ONE: Complete the FAFSA

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is an application used by a school to determine how much a student can receive in financial aid, and from what programs. A few things to know about the FAFSA:

- Completing the FAFSA is the first step in establishing your eligibility for a Pell Grant (a requirement for many campus-support programs) and many other financial aid programs.
- When completing the FAFSA, there is a Student Dependency Status section. To be considered Independent, the student must check the box that says “I was in foster care since turning age 13” or “I was a dependent or ward of the court since turning age 13”. Students also need to obtain form DHS 945 (from Department of Human Services) which verifies court wardship for financial aid purposes.
- When a youth is Independent, only the youth’s income (not income from a parent or guardian) is used in calculating eligibility.

The easiest way to complete the application is to do so online at www.fafsa.gov. Students will also need a pin number as part of the application process. Students can create their own pins at www.pin.ed.gov/PINWebApp/pinindex.jsp

STEP TWO: Explore Finance Options to Support Your Education

Educational and Training Voucher Program (ETV): The Chafee Education and Training Voucher Program provides resources specifically to meet the education and training needs of youth aging out of foster care. Tuition Incentive Program (TIP): TIP is an incentive program that encourages eligible students to complete high school by providing tuition assistance for the first 2 years of college and beyond. To meet the financial eligibility requirement, a student must have (or have had) Medicaid coverage for 24 months within a 36-consecutive-month period as identified by the Michigan Department of Human Services. For more information, visit www.michigan.gov/osg or call 1-888-4-GRANTS.
